Lincoln Tech campuses join in the fight against COVID-19

WEST ORANGE, NJ – April 1, 2020 – Lincoln Educational Services Corporation (NASDAQ: LINC), a national leader in specialized automotive, skilled trades and allied health career training, announced today that several of its campuses in the Tri-State (NY, NJ & CT) area have donated medical supplies and personal protective equipment (PPEs) to major medical facilities throughout the region.

Campuses in Iselin, Moorestown, and Paramus, NJ; and East Windsor, New Britain, and Shelton, CT have donated gloves, gowns, medical masks and other items to healthcare facilities including local hospitals and health systems, as well as regional agencies such as the Bergen County (NJ) Office of Emergency Management. These campuses were able to donate supplies from their inventory of training equipment for healthcare careers including Medical Assisting, Licensed Practical Nursing, Patient Care Associate/Technician, and others. Other campuses have been able to arrange donations of masks from programs including Automotive Technology and Collision Repair and Refinishing Technology.

“Lincoln Tech graduates are on the front lines as healthcare professionals in the fight against this deadly, aggressive disease,” says President and CEO Scott Shaw. “We know our partners in the healthcare industry will need new candidates from our upcoming graduating classes. But at the moment, we’re happy to be able to assist in the fight by providing much-needed supplies wherever possible.”

For nearly 75 years Lincoln schools have assisted communities across the country in times of crisis by providing skilled labor and donating financial and material resources. Lincoln Tech is proud to support members of our local communities since being founded in 1946 to help military vets returning from World War II.
